

GhostGuard — Terms of Use

Last updated: 05 January 2026

These Terms of Use (“Terms”) govern your access to and use of GhostGuard (the “Service”), including the GhostGuard browser extension and any related websites, software, and support services provided by Ghostly Solutions LLC-FZ (“Ghostly Solutions”, “we”, “us”, “our”).

By installing, accessing, or using GhostGuard, you agree to these Terms. If you do not agree, do not install or use the Service.

Service description

1.1. What GhostGuard does. GhostGuard provides informational security warnings about potentially unsafe websites, domains, and links, including phishing, impersonation, scam, and other malicious or suspicious destinations.

1.2. Link/domain analysis. GhostGuard analyzes URLs, domains, and redirect chains and may display a risk level or warning before you interact with a page or enter sensitive information.

1.3. Webmail analysis and link checks. GhostGuard may analyze links shown in webmail interfaces to warn about potentially unsafe destinations. In addition, with your explicit permission, GhostGuard may analyze email text (for example, subject line and/or message text visible in the webmail interface) solely to identify phishing and impersonation patterns and to provide security warnings.

GhostGuard does not read or store email content or message bodies by default, and any email text analysis is performed only for security purposes.

1.4. No guarantee of complete protection. Security threats evolve. GhostGuard does not guarantee that it will detect or prevent all fraud, phishing, malware, or other threats, or that warnings will be accurate in all cases.

Privacy and data principles

- 2.1. Privacy-first approach. GhostGuard is designed to be privacy-first: no tracking, no selling data, and no reading email content.
- 2.2. Email content. GhostGuard never collects or stores email content. If you grant explicit permission for email text analysis, GhostGuard analyzes the permitted email text only to provide security warnings and does not use such content for advertising or profiling.
- 2.3. Permissions. The extension may request browser permissions needed to analyze websites/links, display warnings, and (if you choose) analyze permitted webmail content. Permissions vary by browser and version. You can review requested permissions in the relevant browser store listing before installing and can control certain permissions through browser settings.

You must be legally capable of entering into these Terms under applicable law. If you use GhostGuard on behalf of an organization, you represent that you have authority to bind that organization to these Terms.
